The Report on Retrenchment:

The report of the Congressional committee on retrenchment is said to present an appalling amount of mismanagement, malfeasance, peculation, corruption and villainy on the part of a large portion of the clerks of the Treasury Department, those particularly whose functions are more or less political. The Department is declared to be a mass of rotteness and crime. It to be a mass of rottenness and crime. It is what years of Radical power and dom-ination have made it. We have never had, in this country, a faithfully-taken census, one to be at all relied on, but it is of very great importance on various accounts that we should have such a one now. That we shall have does not seem very probable. The job is likely to be given to political parties or to personal favorites and claimants, who will expect to do the least possible amount of work for the greatest possible amount of pay, caring nothing for the country and not even realizing that its interests are in the alightest degree involved.

There are, in connection with the taking of the ceasus, speculations and calculations, among the Radical members of Congress, as to the ratio of representation in that body for the next ten years. His is a profession in which success is exceptionable. There are ten good painters, ten good sculptors, ten good able. There are ten writers, ten good musicians, where there is one really good actor, yet the sensitive ar-tistic temperament is perhaps as generally acute among actors as with any other class of men and women. Then the stage is almost universally misunderstood. It is iso-lated from the larger world of thought and action; it comes out, like the magic flower of the Arabian fable, only by night; and it is seen in gold and scarlet. Those who behold its fantasies do not follow it beyond the toot-lights; do not penetrate behind the side-ecenes; do not see it denuded of its finsel and clad in its common apparel. It

At this particular moment the pros-pect, it must be conicesed, is none of the brightest, for, as we said in the beginning, the players are dragging their weary foot-steps through the serio-comedy, or annual benefits, with which the winter closes. There is not, in all the world of art, a much more melanchely surgestion, there-whom it washed to keep there for its own uses. So the tenure-of-office law was enacted. Thus the hands of President Johnson were bound. He was President only in name. He beheld, all around him, the wriggling and bloated grubo and maggots of corruption fattening upon the substance of the people, but he had no power to disturb them in the enjoyment of their feast. He was guildess of the base objects to which the Executive prerogatives, wrenched unconstitutionally from him, were devoted by a Congress backed by the armies of the country.

The Radicals of Congress find themselves compelled now by various reasons to make extensive changes in the Treasury Department, and they no longer endeavor to hide but rather incline to expose the villains and substant and buskin; and it seldom or never calls to mind the story of Harlequin who stole lease of power, soon do worse instead of Hon. Were all the testimonials in proof of the virtues of Lawrence's Rosadalls, for the cure of diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys, &c., published in book form, they would make a volume too unwisely for a library. Only a few can be given in a newspaper for want of space. The proprietors sever ask for a certificate, but almost every mail brings them the most fattering letters from parties in all sections of the United States. Try a bottle; it will give you satisfactory evidence of its merits. My wife has been cured of dyspepsia, of long standing, by Dr. Lawrence's Rosadatis. A. P. On the 19th uit. Mr. J. A. Fronde, the eminent historian, was installed as rector of the University of St. Andrew's, in the library hall of St. Mary's College, in presence of a large assemblage of students and the public. Upon the occasion he delivered a long and able lecture before the trades union in May last, which was published in the Fortnightly Re-view for February, has created a profound impression in England and this country.

Cubs.

It seems Dulce is getting tired of his noquarter policy, and has written to Cespedes, the robel General, that he wants to stop the flow of blood. Cespedes has acknowledged the receipt of the Captain General's nots, and asys: "I deplore as much as your Excellency the destruction of all the elements of wealth existing in this privileged island through the effects of the war which the Liberators of Cubs are waging; but it is not my fault, your effects of the war which the Liberators of Cubs are waging; but it is not my fault, your Excellency, if at the present time a war of extermination is declared against us for the only reason that we have raised on our native soil the banner of liberty. I have already resorted to every means for the purpose of avoiding reprisals, but the Spanish chiefs who have been, and still are, operating in this department and in the Central, in their vanity and unqualified pride, have absolutely ignored my communications and persisted in burning everything in their way, destroying plantations, slaughtering domestic animals, and leaving their excasses upon the highways, and even capitaring our women and children. We leaving their carcases upon the highways, and even capturing our women and children. We have met these acts by setting fire with our own hands to our own homes, to show men who have no regard whatever for the practices which in all places govern civilized warfare that we shall spare no sacriface to secure the desired end of the campaign we have entered. Upon. I repeat, therefore, that neither myself nor the army which I command is to be blamed if the Cuban revolution shall destroy the elements of wealth possessed by this country."

"The Great Danger of the Republic."

Mr. E. Darwin Smith has written a very readable article for the April Galaxy upon this subject. "In the history of mankind the question is yet to be determined, whether the Republican government can be long maintained over a populous and largely extended country." He argues that the extent of the country and the multifarious interests of it endanger the peace of the country. "The surest way, therefore, to maintain our National Government, and to perpotuate it, is to make and keep it for the interest of all our people, in every State, to give it their honest by Monal Government, and to perpetuate is, is to make and keep it for the interest of all our people, in every State, to give it their honest and faithful support. It must rest, ultimately, all their honest and faithful support. It must rest, ultimately, all their people. Nothing can be worse for our people. Nothing can be worse for our people than to accustom them to look away from themselves and their home government to kie ankional government, constitution, the state of the money of the state of the state of the money of the state of the state of the canada have people alone, under the protection of wise and equal general laws, and their industry, activity and enterprise, fortered by State laws as need be, will work out for themselves and the nation a glorious destiny. The great extent and newness of the country, the importance of opening every part of it to settlement, and of promoting the largest and freest intereourse and intercommunication among the people and facilitating internal trade, make the subject of the construction of works of internal improvement by the general government, and upon what principles, one of great public consequence."

IV. Stage Morality and the Ballet.

A late number of Blackwood's Magazine contains a very sprightly article on this subject, in which the writer says: "It cannot be ballet, though it partakes of the character of a pagan festival, is of necessity indecent or immodest, and that it may not be made the a pagas resears, is or necessity indecens or immodest, and that it may not be made the source of much innocent and refund enjoyment. It is a mistake, too, to suppose that the ballet has exclusive attractions for men. Educated and accomplished women, both young and old, love to see a handsome girl, handsomely dressed or draped, displaying herself in the graceful figures and movements of the dance, upon the same principle that they admire a picture, a poem, a flower, a tree, a landscape, or anything in the works of God or man that appears to the sense of beauty, proportion and harmony. And if one such young woman is a beautiful sight, fifty or a hundred, or more of such women dressed alike, or slightly differing for the contrast of color, are, pare passes, a beautiful spectacle when they perform their gyrations and evolutions upon the stage, and ne therby gosture, nor sign, ner suggestion convey, or seek to convey, to the mind of the beholder any impression but that which appings from the lea man so cursed by this demon of limitation. It is not merely that I pick up every detestable penciliarity around me, but I watch every move and every accent. perfection, both moral and material, if there was not so much hard work to be done. It must be done by some; and those to whom it falls to do it will inevitably have a less pleasant life than others. But though to annul or entirely after the influences of the world external to ourselves is beyond our humble powers, we can generally either modify them to some extent, or, what comes to the same thing, modify ourselves to sait them, if only successive generations of men address themselves whelly to the task; just as an ladividual may preserve his health in a pestilential climate, though he can do little or nothing to after the climate. And so, though there will probably always be much to regret in the workman's lot, we may look forward to improvements which will give him

A number of worthy, self-relian young men of our city, having associated thefaselves together under the name of the "Young Mon's Literary Society," held their second meeting in the parior of the Young Mon's Christian association, at Weisiger Hall, on Tuesday inst. The object of the society is mutual improvement in debate, in literary culture, in essay writing, in oratory, in rational endoyment, and in all that is desirable. To effect this, the gentlemen who have thus far mado the movement successful have aided in the consolidation.

ed to languish for want of support. As far as the expense of membership is concerned the dues and fees will be but a trifle, and it is proposed by public readings and eniorataments, to make the society self-sustaining. This will be done as soon as possible. It must not be understood, however, that the society is intended for advanced de-baters and accomplished readers and essayitts alone. It is as especially open to those who have merer applared in either of these characters. Mutual cultivation is its prime purpose, and with the ample means

THE BOARD OF TRADE. What It Can and What It Ought to Do. LOCAL STOCKS AND BONDS .- While the deman-

In the accompulsament of this commendate work, the Boards of Trade organized in all the leading commercial centers of the country have taken an active part. The relation they sustain to the merchants, manufacturers, business men and capitalists of the communities where they are established, onfers upon them peculiar advantages, and give to their statements a value which does not commonly attach to statistics emanating from other sources. Taking this view for the subject, we have always awarded to the Louisville Board of Trade special importance, and plainly see wherein it may indefinitely promote the leading interests of Louisville. The subject of manufacturing is at this juncture claiming aspecial attention. Our citizens are annually paying immense sums to workshops North and East for articles that can as well be manufactured here. What are they? What is the cost of production? What the demand?
